Eugenia Marks, retired policy director at Audubon Society of RI, opposes the construction and operation of a pyrolysis facility in the State of Rhode Island to incinerate medical and other waste. The emissions from high heat applied to plastics release toxins that negatively impact human and animal health. In addition, the release to air of carbon dioxide will contribute to climate change. The public benefit of a proposed pyrolysis facility is dubious. Please support H-5923. Eugenia Marks, 11 Methyl St., Providence, RI 02906
