To Whom it may concern,

I recommend allowing all medical and aesthetic professionals in Rhode Island to fully utilize their skills and delegate tasks within their scope of practice. This will help them provide top-quality care and make timely, effective clinical decisions, improving patient outcomes and efficiency in the healthcare system.

This is especially important for fields like aesthetic treatments, where RNs and NPs play a key role. By expanding their scope of practice, we can ensure they offer a broader range of services and work to their full potential, creating a more dynamic and patient-centered environment.

Personally, my RN and NP have been essential to my care, and allowing them to work without restrictions ensures I receive the best treatment. Supporting professional autonomy in Rhode Island will benefit my care and the care of many others in the community.
