I have a simple question. Why are always the people who obey the law who are always the target of these new gun ban laws?

Is it so hard to go after the criminals? Make the laws so tough on the people who commit a crime using a gun that they are afraid to use one.

I first enjoyed shooting in basic training for the Army. It's hard to hit a target. It requires you to gain skills that help you in every stage of life.

It requires discipline, concentration, safety concerns and a little humility so you can admit to mistakes and correct them. Things you can apply to everyday life.

You choose to portray us as bad people because we enjoy shooting.

A little integrity would go a long way here.

If this actually get read,
Thank you for listening,
